Dear Members of Congress:

There are 45.3 million hardworking Americans who live in poverty in part because the federal minimum wage of $7.25 an hour is too low. I support raising the minimum wage to a living wage. No one who works full time should live in poverty.

Bronx woman shot, killed in broad daylight: NYPD

A woman was shot and killed in the Bronx in broad daylight Thursday, steps away from the Pelham Parkway Houses public housing development in Allerton.

Cops responded to an emergency call and found the unidentified woman at around 3:10 p.m. in front of 955 Waring Avenue with a gunshot wound to her chest.

Described only as a woman in her 20s, paramedics said she was unconscious and unresponsive. EMS rushed her to Jacobi Medical Center, where doctors pronounced her dead. The shooting took place not far from two schools — Public School 89 and Christopher Columbus High School — about an hour after school let out.

Authorities said the investigation was ongoing, and no arrests had been made by Thursday evening. METRO

NYPD: Fatal Bed-Stuy fire set intentionally

Police are investigating a fatal fire they said was intentionally set in Brooklyn on Tuesday night and killed two men.

Two women were injured in the blaze at 103 Hancock St. Police responded to the fire around 9:43 p.m. Tyrone Corely, 56, who lived in the third floor apartment, and Stanley Wilkie, 47, who lived in a second floor apartment, were pronounced dead at area hospitals. Two adult women were treated at Kings County Hospital for smoke inhalation and are in stable condition. An investigation has found that accelerant was used in the fire, and police are investigating the blaze as a homicide. METRO

Riders crowd onto a subway car. GETTY IMAGES

More trains in 2016: MTA

The agency said it is spending $5.8 million to add 34 subway round-trips every day — but you have to wait until next June.

WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE
Wendy.Biddlecombe@metro.us

Riders on some of the city's busiest subway lines might be getting a bit of relief in the form of more trains, but not until June 2016.

The MTA is spending $5.8 million to add 34 daily round-trips on 12 lines in the city.

The additional service will be added on the 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, A, E, J, M, N and S trains in an effort to address the surge in ridership, which rose to an average of 5.6 million daily riders in 2014 and is expected to be higher in 2015.

The increase is in the 2016 budget, the MTA said.

The Shuttle

The most significant increase in service will be the 42nd Street shuttle during the evening. The number of trains will double to 24 between 9:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. for a five-minute wait time, the MTA said.

Lexington Line

The MTA's busiest line, the 4, 5 and 6 trains, will get seven more evening round-trip trains.

Eighth Avenue Line

An additional three C train round trips are planned for Sundays. The 1 and 2 lines will get a total of five more peak and evening hour trips; the A, C and E trains will see three additional midday and evening trains, and three additional Sunday morning trips.

"Our subway system is more than a century old and even where we are aided by new technology, we are still limited by the overall age and condition of the system and the maintenance that is needed to run trains safely. Making these service changes wherever we can lets us make the best use of existing resources as we expand to keep up with private sector development," said James L. Ferrara, interim president of NYC Transit.

Gene Russianoff, senior attorney of the Straphangers Campaign, told Metro the increase in round-trips is "triage" dictated by MTA rules to provide additional service based on the agency's loading and policy guidelines.

"They're mandating their own rules and regulations," Russianoff said. "It's not really major; no one will really notice them, a five-minute reduction. I wish it were enough."

No way of knowing how many illegal 'dollar vans' in NYC

A series of proposed bills by city council members aim to enable legal commuter vans while punishing persistent offenders.

CHESTER SORIA
@chestersoria
chester.soria@metro.us

There's no way of knowing exactly how many illegal commuter vans operate in New York City, a city official told lawmakers Thursday.

Taxi and Limousine Commission Chair Meera

Joshi told City Council members on Thursday that there were some 585 authorized commuter vans operating throughout the city, though the agency wasn't sure how many were operating illegally.

"It's safe to say it's probably — I don't think equal — but not far off from equal," Joshi said.

Problems with policing illegal vans have been compounded for the agency since a federal judge declared on Oct. 1 that the TLC's car seizure policy was unconstitutional.

To date, Joshi said the TLC seized 274 vehicles before the judge's decision. Last year, the agency seized 516 vehicles.

The council members mulled over a trio of bills

"It's safe to say it's probably — I don't think equal — but not far off from equal."

Joshi

targeting the commuter vans. One bill would encourage illegal van operators to legitimize themselves by reducing certain burdens — including eliminating a requirement for passenger manifests and pre-arranging pickups and no longer requiring license renewals every six years.

Brooklyn Councilman Jumaane Williams, who introduced the bill to legitimize more van operators, described his intent as helping get more drivers "out of the shadows."

The two other bills would require the TLC to study commuter vans, thereby freezing any new licenses, and increase penalties on any violations. Fines for operating an illegal van can range from $500 and $2,500.

The current bill would hike fines to as high as $4,000.

Queens Councilman Donovan Richards described the problems with commuter vans as a matter of public safety. Over the last few years, officials have pointed to a series of dangerous situations.

In 2014, an illegal van driver attempted to escape police while driving with 10 passengers in his van in Brooklyn. One woman jumped out and injured herself while trying to escape.

Joshi said the TLC agreed with some of the suggestions proposed by council members, but pushed back on others, including eliminating a minimum fine out of concern that judges would reduce them to negligible amounts.

However, Joshi still praised commuter vans as a small but necessary form of transportation for working-class New Yorkers in parts of town that might not have consistent and fast access between two neighborhoods.

"Commuter vans have filled that gap ... admirably," she said.

Cops seek F train assailant

The suspect PROVIDED

Police are looking for a woman they said, along with two others, assaulted a woman waiting for the F train last Thursday. The suspect also tried steal a cellphone from the woman,

The 41-year-old woman was waiting on the F train platform at the Smith Street station in Brooklyn's Gowanus neighborhood when the suspect approached her and told her to hand over her cellphone.

Two other suspects then moved in, police said, assaulting the victim, then fled without her phone.

The victim was treated for bruising to her face at Methodist Hospital and released.

PA OKs plan for new bus terminal

The board said it would announce a design competition that would include the terminal's relocation one block west.

Port Authority Bus Terminal GETTY IMAGES

New York City is getting its new bus terminal — by about 2030 at the earliest.

The board at the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey unanimously approved a $10 billion plan to replace the existing 65-year-old structure at Eighth Avenue between 40th and 42nd streets.

The vote on Thursday approved a series of changes, including the fact that the new terminal would likely be built one block west, between Ninth and 10th avenues.

The existing terminal, which more than 200,000 commuters use every day, would remain in operation until the new structure is complete.

There's still plenty to be worked out, including the new terminal's design. The board agreed to launch a design competition that would also incorporate connections to existing transfer points.

The proposal beat out earlier suggestions, including one to relocate the terminal to New Jersey.

In May, the board also unanimously approved a $3.6 billion plan to redevelop La Guardia Airport, using a public-private partnership to defray costs for taxpayers.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo previously said the airport's renovation would be completely rebuilt by 2021. Last year, Vice President Joe Biden referred to La Guardia as something from "a third world country."

Toyota, Microsoft, Chrysler among big advertisers for Yahoo NFL game

Tech giant guarantees brands 3.5 million streams in United States, buyers said.

Toyota Motor Corp., Microsoft Corp. and Chrysler are among the brands that will advertise this weekend during Yahoo Inc.'s first live-streamed National Football League game, the Internet company said Thursday.

Yahoo will stream Sunday's game between the Buffalo Bills and Jacksonville Jaguars, the first time viewers around the world can watch an NFL game online free. It kicks off in London at 2:30 p.m., or 9:30 a.m. Eastern time.

"We are completely sold out on ads," Lisa Utzschneider, Yahoo's chief revenue officer, told Reuters in an interview, adding that more than 30 brands had signed up to advertise.

Early birds in the United States can watch the pregame show starting at 8 a.m. Eastern time with commentary from Yahoo's fantasy football experts, who will also answer questions from viewers. Dairy Queen is the pregame sponsor and Toyota is the half-time sponsor.

Chrysler, Microsoft and American Express are among the brands that have bought 15- to 30-second spots during the game, Utzschneider said.

Advertisers had the option to target spots domestically or globally, meaning viewers in London, for example, may see different ads than viewers in New York, Utzschneider said.

Over the past few months, Yahoo dropped its asking price for ads during the game to less than $100,000 from $200,000, two media buyers familiar with the situation told Reuters.

While the opportunity to advertise during the game may be attractive to global brands, it is less so for U.S. brands because the game is early for West Coast viewers, and fans in the game's local markets will be able to view it on television on CBS affiliates, the sources told Reuters.

Still, advertisers are interested to see how many viewers tune in and if the game results in future partnerships between the NFL and Yahoo or its competitors.

The NFL will be taking a close look at not just how many viewers watch the game, but which devices they're watching it on, the quality of the viewing experience, whether the game draws a larger share of millennial viewers and how they are using social media to talk about it, said Vishal Shah, the NFL's vice president of digital media strategy.

The league also will study viewership in various regions, he said. The game will take place in prime time in Asian markets.

The NFL has other online offerings. Game highlights and news appear on platforms such as Twitter and YouTube. Live games can be watched on various apps by customers with pay TV subscriptions.

FOUND: 1,600-YEAR-OLD ROMAN GLADIATOR COINS

HOLD THE GLORY OF ROME IN THE PALM OF YOUR HAND

When your famous father appoints you Caesar at age 7, you're stepping into some very big sandals. But when that father is Emperor Constantine the Great, those sandals can be epic!

Constantius II, became Caesar at 7, and a Roman Emperor at age 20. Today, he is remembered for helping continue his father's work of bringing Christianity to the Roman Empire, as well as for his valiant leadership in battle.

But for many collectors, his strongest legacy is having created one of the most fascinating and unique bronze coins in the history of the Roman Empire: the "Gladiator's Paycheck".

THE GLADIATORS PAYCHECK

Roman bronze coins were the "silver dollars" of their day. They were the coins used for daily purchases, as well as for the payment of wages. Elite Roman Gladiators—paid to do battle before cheering crowds in the Colosseum—often received their monthly 'paycheck' in the form of Roman bronze coins.

But this particular Roman bronze has a gladiator pedigree like no other! Minted between 348 to 361 AD, the Emperor's portrait appears on one side of this coin. The other side depicts a literal clash of the gladiators. One warrior raises his spear menacingly at a second warrior on horseback. Frozen in bronze for over 1,600 years, the drama of this moment can still be felt when you hold the coin. Surrounding this dramatic scene is a Latin inscription—a phrase you would never expect in a million years!

HAPPY DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN

The Latin inscription surrounding the gladiators reads: "Happy Days are Here Again" (Fel Temp Reparatio). You see, at the time these coins were designed, the Emperor had just won several important military battles against the foes of Rome. At the same time, Romans were preparing to celebrate the 1100th anniversary of the founding of Rome. To mark these momentous occasions, this new motto was added and the joyful inscription makes complete sense.

A MIRACLE OF SURVIVAL FOR 1,600 YEARS

For more than sixteen centuries, these stunning coins have survived the rise and fall of empires, earthquakes, floods and two world wars. The relatively few Roman bronze coins that have survived to this day were often part of buried treasure hoards, hidden away centuries ago until rediscovered and brought to light.

These authentic Roman coins can be found in major museums around the world. But today, thanks to GovMint.com, you can find them a little closer to home: your home!

Claim your very own genuine Roman Gladiator Bronze Coin for less than $40 (plus s/h). Each coin is protected in a clear acrylic holder for preservation and display. A Certificate of Authenticity accompanies your coin.

Unfortunately, quantities are extremely limited. Less than 2,000 coins are currently available. Demand is certain to be overwhelming so call now for your best chance at obtaining this authentic piece of the Roman Empire.

THE FUN STARTS HERE

"Jem and the Holograms" is the latest in a long line of films about all-female bands. Here are seven of the best.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

On Friday, "Jem and the Holograms" — about suburban teen YouTube sensations turned pink-haired pop stars — opens in theaters. Though rumor has it the movie bears little resemblance to the truly outrageous 1980s cult cartoon series that inspired it, "Jem" does have a few things going for it: Ziggy Stardust-worthy makeup (on fleek), Juliette Lewis as an evil music manager and — most important — girls, rocking out.

Rock 'n' roll has long been a symbol of rebellion, but it's particularly subversive when played by women. Think of 1970s feminist punk trio The Slits, who were thrown out of more hotels and more feared than any of their male contemporaries, or on the pop spectrum, Madonna and Miley Cyrus, who have both inspired hand-wringing about the downfall of moral society.

That kind of power to upset and shock people is why directors keep making movies about all-girl bands. They not only have the potential to subvert Hollywood's — and the larger culture's — gender norms, combat conformity and indulge in sensationalism (drugs, lesbianism, etc.); they provide a natural vehicle to explore female friendship and identity (something sorely lacking in most films). Besides, it's exhilarating to watch a group of gals tear it up.

Whether "Jem" is worthy to join the ranks of such anarchic treasures as "Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains" or even "Spice World" remains to be seen. But in honor of its release — and of rebel girls everywhere — we have rounded up a few of the best movies celebrating girl power.

'Beyond the Valley of the Dolls' (1970)

At the center of this Roger Ebert-penned sex-and-drug-fueled exploitation flick is the Carrie Nations (née the Kelly Affair), a trio of musical babes who travel to Los Angeles in search of fame. What seems on its face a morality tale (things soon spiral out of control for the gals, as is wont to happen in late '60s Hollywood) is actually a balls-out satire of celebrity, pop culture and pretty much everything we hold sacred.

"Beyond the Valley of the Dolls" 20TH CENTURY FOX

'Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains' (1982)

One of the best rock movies ever made, "The Stains" features a group of teenagers (including a young Diane Lane and Laura Dern) who can barely play or sing but, in true punk fashion, form a band anyway.

Much to the consternation of male rock critics, they begin to use their platform to spread the gospel of feminism, inspiring young girls everywhere to dye their hair, run away from home and form their own bands. Lane's skunk-like hair and wild face paint still slay.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, the Fabulous Stains" PARAMOUNT PICTURES

'Desperately Seeking Susan' (1985)

Though not technically a movie about a rock band, this mad caper about mistaken identities and general hell-raising is about as close to punk's anarchic spirit as you can get. Plus, its leather-clad heroines — played by Madonna (in her first film role) and Rosanna Arquette — are actually celebrated for their antics instead of chastised.

'Spice World' (1997)

OK, hear us out: This update on the Beatles' "Hard Day's Night"

Spice World COLUMBIA PICTURES

featuring Scary, Baby, Sporty, Posh and Ginger getting ready for an epic concert in London, is a third-wave feminist romp, showing that these gals can party, cause a sensation and wreak havoc even better than the Fab Four.

'Josie and the Pussycats' (2001)

Like "Jem," this film, about a trio of girl rockers, was based on a cartoon. Though it bombed at the box office, it has become a cult classic, remembered for its sly takedown of corporate greed and conformity. The tunes — sung by '90s group Lettters to Cleo — are super catchy, and it stars

"Josie and the Pussycats" UNIVERSAL PICTURES

a wonderfully slimy Alan Cumming as the (slightly inept) villain.

'The Runaways' (2010)

Kristen Stewart plays a baby Joan Jett in this biopic about her first teen rock band, The Runaways. Part punk, part glam, the group had long been dismissed as something of a shock act due to its young members' provocative antics and innuendo-laden lyrics. Here, the talented ladies get their due.

'We Are the Best!' (2014)

Two Swedish misfits want to start a punk band, so they recruit a fundamentalist Christian folkie at their school to teach them guitar. The three form an unlikely friendship, and this sweet, delightfully scrappy film chronicles the rocky road to their first messy, riot-inducing basement gig. No fame and glory, but they don't care. These girls just wanna have fun.

Elijah Wood isn't afraid of Vin Diesel

The star got to see the dorky side of his he-man co-star on "The Last Witch Hunter."

Like his fellow "Lord of the Rings" co-stars, Elijah Wood has the luxury of being picky. He could have settled for a string of never-ending fantasy knockoffs. Instead, like Viggo Mortensen, he's done what he wants. The last decade has seen him lending his presence to smaller and/or unusual fare: the first-person horror "Maniac"; "Open Windows," set entirely on a desktop; the TV show "Wilfred," in which he acts opposite a talking dog. Wood comes back to both big budgets and fantasy with "The Last Witch Hunter," a supersized Vin Diesel vehicle in which he plays the new priestly sidekick to the star's immortal slayer of the supernatural. He didn't take the job lightly.

First off, I should ask about Vin Diesel. He seems like he might not be as intimidating as his screen image.

He's many things. He's lovely. He's friendly to everybody. He's got a big personality. He's also kind of not intimidating. I think people would think he's intimidating. He sort of isn't. He's a softie. He's also a big D&D fan, and he's a big Tolkien nerd and a fantasy fan. In a lot of ways, this character is closer to him than anything he's done in the past. That's cool to know there's this side to him that doesn't get expressed much in cinema. But it's a big part of who he is.

What convinced you this was a worthy return to big-budget genre fare?

It's weird to even say this, because it wasn't the case 20 years ago, but it was interesting to read something that was not based on a pre-existing source or was a sequel. It's bizarre that we have to say one of a film's merits is that it's original. F—ing strange. But it is the case. So it was interesting to me that something was going to be made on this scale that was entirely original. And I was just surprised by the script. I found the mythology to be really detailed, the world-building to be really interesting.

The sets appear to be mostly real, as do many of the effects.

Some people are asking questions about what it was like to deal with the CG. In reality, it was almost imperceptible to us — save for the witch bar, where there was quite a bit of CG effects. But even there, there were a lot of practical effects. Most of the time, we were surrounded by real things. Even the sentinel at the end — there was a sentinel there. That goes a long way to making you feel rooted in the space.

Is it typical for you to get so involved with looking at all aspects of a production?

These are all questions I ask, honestly. When I read something, I want to know what the approach is, who's going to shoot it, how it's going to be shot, what is the visual tone of the film and what are the designs going to look like. I'm a nerd, so I always ask these questions.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

"The Last Witch Hunter" isn't based on a book series. But it feels like it is. And perhaps it should be. It's a riot of dense, impenetrable mythology about Vin Diesel's Kaulder, a slayer cursed with immortality, "Highlander"-style, now cruising about New York City, keeping an underworld of witches in line. There's a token conspiracy that forces Kaulder to team with a nice witch (Rose Leslie) who has the secret power of invading other people's dreams and who is also a bartender.

Weirdness gets piled on like a mile-high

"Scooby Doo" sandwich. There's a blocky monster who works for a witch council. There's Michael Caine, mostly playing a corpse. There's a tree made of gummi bears. The wacko keeps coming, and the world expands ever outward, like the tendrils that spring from the film's many, many pieces of tree and wood imagery.

Maybe we even succumb to the insanity. It's the only sane response. It can be freeing, even fun, to give yourself over to a film like "The Last Witch Hunter," especially because it comes from a good place. It was ushered forth by its star, a not-so-secret D&D and Tolkien nerd who actually seems to be having fun. In the last few "Fast and/or Furious" outings, he's seemed sleepy, if not full-on narcoleptic. But in "The Last Witch Hunter," he cracks jokes, even flirts with Leslie. "Witch Hunter" has the ricketiest of foundations, but at least it's not hollow.

A scene of Bill Murray playing "Smoke on the Water" for native Afghans doesn't go so well in "Rock the Kasbah." KERRY HAYES

"Rock the Kasbah"

Director: Barry Levinson
Stars: Bill Murray, Kate Hudson

• • • • •

Bill Murray has been an untouchable god since "Rushmore," or perhaps forever, so it's odd to think of him ever being terrible. Yet here's "Rock the Kasbah," which is a good/bad way of seeing Murray at his worst. It's him indulging in his laziest and most clueless tendencies, among them ignoring an obviously sloppy and dumb script that teems with Ugly Americanisms.

"Rock the Kasbah" is essentially "Bill Murray Goes to Afghanistan," with his scuzzy music promoter winding up in Kabul intending to put on a show; instead, he gets gunplay and jokes about foreigners. Eventually he scores a new find: an Afghan tribeswoman who has the chops to be the first woman participant on "Afghan Idol."

Murray won't let this turn into a soft-hearted "Danny Collins," but he does seem ill-advisedly game to just act like a doofus in another country. And this is how a comic institution becomes actively annoying. An endless scene of him howling "Smoke on the Water" in front of confused tribesmen is a low point in the Murray canon. It makes "Larger Than Life," the elephant comedy from his pre-"Rushmore" dog days, look enticing. MP

Aubrey Peeples (with "Aladdin Sane" face paint) tries to overcome the evil managerial stylings of Juliette Lewis in the "Jem and the Holograms" movie. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Jem and the Holograms'

Director: Jon M. Chu
Stars: Aubrey Peeples, Juliette Lewis

A straight-faced "Josie and the Pussycats," but with a robot, the "Jem and the Holograms" movie is an earnest melodrama, and also an origin story, but also a sometime sci-fi movie, plus a YA movie, as well as a movie for the Miley/Taylor generation, and even occasionally an ad-lib-heavy comedy, because those are popular too. It's a movie about a crisis of identity: Shy teen Jerrica (Aubrey Peeples) can only sing through her titular persona, which includes pink hair and a hot red "Aladdin Sane" streak across her face. But it's also a movie with a crisis of identity.

For a while, things seem simple, even dull. Jerrica and sibs are just aspiring musicians who go viral, which shuffles them into the hands of blatantly evil label owner Erica Raymond, played with copious, awe-inspiring bitchiness by Juliette Lewis. For a while, you might think an old Hasbro toon has been turned into a painfully ordinary tale of corruption in the music

biz. Then comes the robot. This is a sci-fi movie too? Goofy and bleep-blooping in the George Lucas mould, he's mostly around to spice up a narrative that was being made fun of all the way back in 1970's "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls."

For a film with futuristic tech (but only two holograms), it's too often stuck in the boring real world, not the fantastical one of the show. These are all problems that can be fixed in the sequel, for this is also, on top of everything else, in its final moments a Marvel movie, with a bumper touting stuff that would baffle everyone but the fans. House of Wax opening party

The human body has been a source of equal parts fascination and disgust for centuries. The Morbid Anatomy Museum's new exhibit, House of Wax, resurrects an old German panopticum — a cross between a curio cabinet and legitimate museum — with a showcase wax bodies that show the ravaging effects of disease and celebrity "death masks," among other works. Because you'll probably want to be a little tipsy for this trip into the uncanny valley, get to Friday's opening party for talks and complimentary Hendrick's gin cocktails and wine. Oct. 23, 424 Third Ave., VIP $50, 7 p.m.; GA $40, 8 p.m., MorbidAnatomyMuseum.org

Look out for the top matchups in NFL Week 7

One-week fantasy football players might not realize this because they have their head down grinding out lineups, but we have reached the traditional season-long fantasy halfway point. It is all downhill (or uphill) from here.

Passing Matchup Gems

1. CHARGERS VS. RAIDERS

You don't need to know the Raiders are the second-worst defense against the pass. Philip Rivers just ripped a good Green Bay Packers defense for over 500 yards. The Chargers are also back home.

2. COWBOYS VS. GIANTS

You might not trust Matt Cassel ($6,400) in his first Cowboys start, but he is facing a weak Giants secondary that has allowed the third-most passing yards this season. Cassel, Jason Witten ($5,600), Terrance Williams ($5,900) and Cole Beasley ($5,200) are options to fill out lineups with short money.

Rushing Matchup Gems

1. GURLEY VS. BROWNS

Todd Gurley ($7,400) should already be on the top of everyone's lineup list, as we wrote in Wednesday's Fantasy Class. He has made two starts in his young career and averaged over 150 yards, 25 touches and 6.2 yards per carry.

2. PETERSON VS. LIONS

The Lions are sixth-worst against the run and have allowed the second-most rushing touchdowns to fantasy backs, per FFFToday.com. Adrian Peterson ($8,900) should be busy here.

Defenses vs. Bad QBs

1. REDSKINS VS. WINSTON

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Jameis Rickson return from their bye week against an underrated Redskins defense ranked eighth in the NFL right now. The Redskins are a value at $4,400.

2. FALCONS VS. MARIOTA

Marcus Mariota has been dealing with a knee issue, so he will not be 100 percent if he does play. Also, Dan Quinn's presence is a lot more significant than you might have imagined.

Scorching-hot Mets wait for opponent

The Mets will either face the Blue Jays or Royals in the 2015 World Series.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

The Mets made quick work of the Chicago Cubs in the NLCS, sweeping the series. They never trailed in any game during the series, and looked superior on both sides of the ball.

Cubs manager Joe Maddon was gracious in defeat, telling reporters after the game, "They played well. They didn't make mistakes. I've got to give them credit."

Because they won the NLCS so quickly, the Mets will be able to set their starting rotation for the World Series exactly the way they want it. Jacob deGrom, who is 3-0 with a 1.80 ERA in three starts this postseason, will most likely start Game 1 of the Fall Classic on Tuesday night, Oct. 27. After deGrom, the Mets have Matt Harvey, Noah Syndergaard and Steven Matz to turn to, and so far the Mets starters have been nothing short of incredible in the postseason.

The Mets' relievers have been just as good, and they've been led by Jeurys Familia, who finished all four games against the Cubs in the NLCS. Familia has yet to allow a run in 9.2 innings of work this postseason, and has surrendered just two hits and two walks. Familia has five saves in eight appearances. Addison Reed had three scoreless outings in four appearances during the playoffs, and looks like the Mets' second-best option out of the bullpen going into the World Series. Tyler Clippard has been the set-up man but has a 5.79 ERA in 4.2

innings, which is less than ideal.

Bartolo Colon, who up until this season had never pitched in relief, has been able to pitch effectively when the Mets starters stumble.

As for the Mets' offense, no one has been swinging a hotter bat — ever — than NLCS MVP Daniel Murphy. The Mets' infielder broke an MLB record by hitting a home run in six straight playoff games, despite the fact that he had 14 home runs all year coming into the postseason. He is currently batting .421 this October. When asked after the game by TBS about his hot streak, the humble Murphy could not come up with a reason.

"I can't explain it," Murphy said. "It's such a blessing to contribute to what we've been able to do."

Maddon was dumbfounded when asked to explain Murphy's hot streak as well.

"It's just incredible,"

For World Series coverage, visit metro.us he told the media after the game. "Line drive to left, homer to right or homer to center. He looks like he's going to hit the ball hard on every pitch. It's unusual to see a guy that locked in."

Curtis Granderson (.303) and Wilmer Flores (.292) have also been getting on base. Yoenis Cespedes and Travis d'Arnaud have provided some pop. Having five days off between games could affect the Mets' momentum, but if it doesn't, they will certainly be a force to be reckoned with in the World Series.

NFL

What to watch for as Giants host Cowboys

The Giants will look to avenge their season-opening loss, and stay atop the NFC East Sunday. And should they do that, they could put a crippling blow to any hope that the Dallas Cowboys (2-3) have of staying in the divisional race.

Can they protect Eli?

Eli Manning was sacked three times last week, and battered countless other times — including being forced into a couple of intentional grounding calls due to the fierce rush. He was an entirely different quarterback during his thrilling comeback victory over the 49ers two weeks ago than he was in Philadelphia. That was due to the fact his offensive linemen took care of him against San Francisco, but hung him out to dry against the Eagles.

Start fast, and stay fast

The Giants executed a brilliant 80-yard touchdown-scoring drive to start last week's game, and then fizzled out the rest of the way, never to score again.

Despite being undermanned, the Cowboys are still a formidable foe, simply off of familiarity, so Big Blue will need to jump on them early and not give them any hope of staying in the game. When bad teams hang around too long, it's a recipe for disaster for the superior team, so Manning and Co. will need to duplicate last week's start and then keep the momentum going.

Capitalize on opportunities

Head coach Tom Coughlin stresses the importance of winning the turnover battle each week, and last week against the Eagles was a time where winning that margin didn't translate to a victory. It was a rare occurrence, as they had a plus-one in that category, but didn't score a single point off their four takeaways. Dallas' new starting quarterback, Matt Cassel, has been known to give some away (14 touchdowns and 13 interceptions in the last two seasons), so it's imperative that Big Blue finds a way to force those errors — and capitalize.

"We had four turnovers (last week) and nothing to show for it," Coughlin said. "That was a very unusual circumstance in any game. Usually when you do have an opportunity for those things to take place, you take advantage — and quite frankly, there probably could have been more. We didn't take advantage of anything and that's disappointing." TONY WILLIAMS

3 Things to watch for as the Jets take on the Patriots

A mid-season battle for the AFC East lead kicks off Sunday at 1 p.m.

KRISTIAN DYER
@KristianRDyer
sports@metro.us

Don't look now but the New York Jets are 4-1 and are suddenly right in the thick of things for the playoffs.

And on Sunday, they face their old nemesis in the Patriots and at a place they haven't won at since the 2010 playoffs. Now they have an opponent that is undefeated and clearly the talk of the league for things other than cheating and Deflategate. The Patriots are good, and until otherwise are the class of the division.

1 MATCH WITS WITH BRADY

The Jets, with one of the best defenses in the league, will have to slow down a Patriots offense that is deep and talented. And it is led by Tom Brady, whose numbers are fully inflated this year. In fact, he is on pace for a career-year in yards (5,437) and touchdowns (45), a pace that would easily eclipse his gaudy numbers from 2011. He's also on track to only throw three interceptions this season.

"He's been in the same scheme for a long time. He knows the guys he's worked with. [Julian] Edelman, [Danny] Amendola, [Rob Gronkowski]. In saying that, they've got great chemistry and kind of knowing where guys are supposed to be," Jets linebacker Calvin Pace said. "They don't make mistakes, they're not going to beat themselves and our challenge is to try and force them to make mistakes, get some pressure on Tom and make his day difficult."

2 NOTHING NEW HERE

The Patriots are 5-0 for the fourth time in franchise history and for the third time since they drafted Brady. A win on Sunday would make them 6-0 for the third time in team history but also would put them in a strong spot to win seven consecutive AFC East titles. If they do that, it would be a new record in the NFL. For comparison sake, the Jets last won the division in 2002.

3 CONTROL TURNOVERS

Not surprisingly, in games where Jets quarterback Ryan Fitzpatrick limits turnovers, the Jets win. The team is 4-0 when Fitzpatrick throws a single interception, showing that with decent quarterback play, the Jets can be a dangerous team.

"I think he's a really smart player. They've put a lot on him in terms of running the offense. They check plays and take the best look and things like that," Patriots head coach Bill Belichick said. "In the passing game, I think he throws into some tight coverage situations, but he's got big receivers like [Brandon] Marshall and [Eric] Decker and gives them a chance to make plays on the ball and they're making them. I don't think we're going to fool this guy too much, I don't really think that's part of it."

In Week 3, when Fitzpatrick had three interceptions, the Jets lost. If he can make smart throws, the Jets have a chance in every game this season. Including this one.
